

Group Learner™ Dramatically Reduces Training Costs

Group Learner™ helps organisation in the food industry consistently meet their regulatory requirements when it comes to the delivery, certification and management of training. We have helped many organisations reduce costs, increase profit and consistently achieve 100% compliance rates.

The Problem

Despite the economic climate food companies within the UK and Ireland continue to maintain their success domestically and internationally. A common trend that has resulted from the changing climate is that companies are seeking maximum productivity at minimum expense. One area that is under scrutiny recently is the training and development departments as training managers and HR managers look for ways to better manage and control this function. New laws and regulations that have been introduced in recent years mean that food companies need to ensure that all members of their workforce have the correct level of training in food hygiene and health & safety in order to undertake their role effectively and to remain with the law.

The Solution

One company who is helping food companies better manage training whilst also removing the headaches and complexities of compliance training is Group Learner Ltd. Group Learner's Volume Trainer™ solution is fast becoming a hit with a lot of food companies due to the cost savings and the simplicity of the system. This solution allows clients to save up to 75% on the cost of training in comparison to the existing training method they were previously using. The company uses modern approaches to train large volumes of staff cost effectively and efficiently. The solution is ideal for organisations that have large volumes of staff to train and finding it difficult to incorporate one solution that can easily be integrated to take care of all their training needs.

There are various types of courses available via Group Learner and all courses are accredited by City & Guilds and CPD. The courses include Food Safety Levels 1 & 2 for Manufacturing, retail, catering and Health & Safety for food workers. There are other courses such as Manual handling, Managing Safety and Slips, Trips & Fall, and Fire Safety etc. available. The duration for most of the courses ranges from 2.5 hours to 45 minutes.

Speaking with Annemarie Doohan, Marketing Manager of Group Learner, she states that "Group Learner is fast becoming the preferred training method among many food companies within the UK and Ireland due to the significant cost saving and the ability to train large volumes fast. We provide a simple and hassle free training solution that allows clients to remain and stay compliant within industry. We recognise that our clients have a lot of internal audits like Marks & Spencers, Tesco's and Sainsbury's etc. we try to help make these less stressful and provide the technology to prove compliance at the click of a button".
